ELOQUENT ADDRESS OF COL. W. C. P. BRECKINRIDGE TO THE GRADUATING CLASS OF THE KENTUCKY MILITARY IN-

The following is a corrected report of Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge's Address "on behalf of was with him. Livingstone is now lost in the the Kentucky Military Institute" on Com-inencement Day, June 8, 1871, several times in her neighborhood, and Idal Lewis is but a alluded to in these columns, as one of the most brilliant, thoughtful, and suggestive that the annual commencements and examinations duty in the heart being louder than how lot have elicited in any part of the country. In fact, we might go further and say that it was man of every town braves the fire for the superior to any and all of them-a Southern classic -- a sort of half human, all divine thing' that no man has the fortune to listen to more than two or three times in an ordi nary lifetime. We were so fortunate as to be present and hear it spoken from the platform and that, as every lover of true eloquence and its great triumphs knows, was a peculiar privilege. We have heard the famous and immortal Prentiss; and whether in delivery, or in substance, or in exciting the true chivalrous and poetic sentiment, we never heard anything from any one better than, if so good Young Gentlemen of the Military Institute: If I rightly understand the nature of the duty I am called to perform it is in the name of this Institute and of its Faculty to niter the last words of warning and affection you will Lear before the diplomas are given, the rewards of merit distributed, and the present session closed. Speaking for your Alma Mater. in the name of your instructors, whose faithful and laborious devotion has demonstrated their love, I charge you to remember that du'y performed in love is the highest and noblest, as it is the most important and fruitful, manifestation of a nature created in the likeness of the Creator. This is the great lesson of lite, and you cannot be reminded of it too often, nor bear it in mind too solemnly. Man, by the very act of his creation in the likeness of a per oaal God, is a distinct unit, each man to and in himself. We feel, each one of as, a rersonal freedom, intelligence, accountability. a of above all, a personal and individual des tity. Alone each was born-alone will each ilie--alone will each be judged. Yet it is equal y true that man it a social being, survariety of tie. He is a son, a brother, a father, a friend, a servant, a master. He is a member of a household, of a family of several households. Widening the circle, he is a citizen of holds. Widening the circle, he is a citizen of the State—one of a particular race; and still widening the view, he is a fellow-man to all the living—joint heir with them of "all the ages," and in part responsible for all the future; and over all, his Creator, that of all his race—is the Almighty to whom duries are owed. From the cradle to the grave, thus surrounded, each man finds his lot before him and larged and have the bed-side of a sick wife, receiving and sending messages of love and comfort. being, and to every relation we sustain. The more varied the ties, the more numerous the selves hold the more important the duties be-of this universal law; but how different in degree is the work assigned. The humble idiot who, on the sea-beach of England, learned of God from wind and wave and sky, and the noblest genius whose name is a priceless her-itage of a world, alike answer to the bar of conscience and of God; but how vast the difstand the history, necessities, and aspirations opens a tender, easily touched heart to him of the world of to-day, and in a more peculiar who pleads for charity and kindaess.

It is an age of uniou and co-operation. Naof the State of which you are a citizen. These are high and noble studies, worthy of your most profound and thoughtful attention. Believe me, young gentlemen, you cannot find a more interesting subject of thought and meditation than that thus commended to you. The state of to der its wonderful achievements. Our race excited in a degree altogether without precedent. In every land old things are passing away; the foundations of ages are torn up; the institutions of centuries are pulled down; the habitudes of greential down; The slamber of years is broken; and watchful, earnest, and heroic does the race struggle to deserve its divine destiny. We live in heroic age. You jostle heroes in every crowd into which you press—heroes of the battle-field, nobler heroes of the unheroided dangers in the hearing of men who have charged can-

Grunian valor has received as Grecian valor has received a new glory in Crete, and the siege of Paris demonstrated tha hixury does not destroy conrage. Whereve the sun goes in its diurnal revolution, it looks upon battie-fields where the graves are fresh and the grass green from new-shed blood. The heroes of war, numerous as they are, are not more numerous than the nobler heroes of peace. The ordinary life of to-day produce

The nameless fire stranger wrapped in its embrace. Death comes in no shape so terrible as to daunt the gloriou ourage of a heroic heart.

The very air is full of this glorious inspiraion, and at the time of need there steps forth he man of to-day, who holds life ready to b iven to duly. It is a generous age. Hospi als of every kind, asylums for the orphan, th vidow, the lunatic, the idiot, the poor, do every section. Churches, colleges and school-houses adorn every village. Charities are abundant and money flows freely for the improvement of the race, the alleviation of misery, he assnagement of sorrow. It is a daring age. culties retard. The lightning is taken from the skies, the ribs of the mountains are opened, the bowels of earth are invaded, the secrets o cean, and air, and rock, and sky are wrested from their grasp. Mines are dug, valleys filled up, mountains leveled or tunnelled, rivers bridged and dannind, canals constructed Time, space and distance annihilated. The telescop makes the dicams of Jean Paul simple prose to the sublime realities of the starry climes. The microscope has added new worlds eter and thermometer foretell that soon the secrets of storm, and cloud, and rain, and snow will be ours. The trackless ocean has been mapped, and the highways of nations marked on its submissive bosom; while light-houses guard its Seylla and Charybdis', and steam laughs its calms to scorn. You constantly hear it said that this is a majerial age. I do not know that I comprehered the sentence. Those who thus talk add that poetry, romance, eloquence, sentiment, old-fashioned love, and kindred virtues, and gifts, belong to the past; that we live a realistic matter of-fact, material age. If they mean that man has greatly extended his don over the material world-that is true. True, too, that false science is passing away-that truth is becoming more truly sovereign. The handswork of God is nobler than the imaginations of man-the real is nobler than the ideal. The pure emotions of the human heart are tenderer and lovelier than the fancies of the poet. The inventive faculty is akin to innow to the world instead of to the neighborspiration, and to day the world is filled with the poetry of action and the eloquence of achievement. Do men fight the worse because of needle-guns, rifled eannon, and all the modern appliances of war? Let Shiloh, Sidowa, and Sedan answer. Dues Tennyson us, the richer our blessings, the wider our circle of influence, the greater our opportunities, the more pressing and heavy become the obligations we owe. The humblest peasant and the mightiest king alike are the subjects of this universal law, but how different is the lamble made and telegraph carry them around the globe? Is the lumble midden of the village less radiant and less courted because her neat laws was made in a courted because her neat laws. The more abundant the gifts bestowed upon dress was made in a couple of hours on the sewing machine, rather than in a couple of days by hand? The song of the shirt, with its "stitch, stitch, stitch," belongs to the past, and the poetry of to-day is the whirr of the falling dew and ripening rain that gave to the wheat its golden and heavy grain have made the tares grow. The conrage of the day fills the heart of him who seeks wealth as of him who seeks souls. The race for mastery is sternly and crnelly contested. Crime is unblushing and vice ostentations. The evil is mixed with the good. The bluzing extrava-gance of ill gotten wealth vies with the generous gifts from honest accumulations. gambling hell is not far distant from the school, and the den of vice is but around the corner from the house of God. Thus it has ever been -thus it will ever be. The old faith is ques tioned-the sacred oracles are denied; the victim of Calvary is made a myth, and the tuture an enigma. This, too, is an old fight, ever renewed. It began in Paradise, and with end only upon the realization of the Apocalyp-

Into this active, carnest, intense, aggressive doubting world of conflict, you have to hear your part. Let me beg of you to remember it is your part you must play; not muother's but our own. The world has no time to give you many opportunities. There never was but one Esther in all Israel-never a day but for one Esther, and she came to the kingdom for heroism. The papers of each day recount with unvarying monotony to readers accusionent that if she had not risen to the height of the duty assigned to her God would save her people otherwise, and she would perish.

Take this lesson home. There never was before-there never will be ugain-a day for any one of you. Your day is now. Accept it and act your part; neglect it and disappear. These are the alternatives. Not only is there but one day, but only one place, for each of you. An army has but one chief, but it ha generals, subordinate officers, non-cummissione officers, and privates; it has engineers, artil lerists, eavalry men, sappers, spies, and scont The sentry must pace his lonely beat inspire by the same devotion to duty, the same zea for the cause, the same self-abnegation as th commander-in-chief. It is not for fame the true soldier fights. He would fall in the petty skirmish of forgotten name with the same he rote devotion as in the glorious charge unde the rye of a chieftain which decided the fats of the hour. The sublime sease of duty is the true basis of a character worthy of succes Fame, wealth, power, these may come, but they are not objects to be struggled for. They are as attendants, serviceable and powerful; as masters, they are despotic and destroying It is the great lesson of life to learn to do you luty, because it is your duty-simply. fully doing not for reward, and not thinkin,

It is your duty to know your country and her institutions, laws and the spirit of her people. Your education imposes important daties upon you. You country needs brave, clear-headed, large-heart of sons. There open noble lives in this republi to power, repair her losses, and preserve to al citizens a true liberty, regulated by law. But I turn from this.

It has been cloquently said that, as a race, man is a dead race rather than a living race that generation after generation follow each other to the dark shores of the eternal world as wave after wave break on the rock-ribbed shore. The pale nations of the sheeted dead far outunmber the living. That life is but lighted passway, across which shadows fli from darkness into darkness. We stand on th narrow line between the dead of the past and the dead of the future. But the dead of the never perish. Our race is not a mighty occ with recurring and ebbing waves. Our past not darkness-our future impenetrable nigh We are glorious unities, but little lower than the angels, made in the hkeness of the Lore God Almighty, and with an eternal tuture These are verities. We can not change them We must include them in any estimate we may make of our true duties. We can no told our hands if we would. An irresistible power forces us onward. The battle is before us, and we must take part. We have choi as to our part, but that choice must be exercised or it is exercised for us. The current of time waits not for ns-before its mighty swe on barrier stands. The progress of the race neward, and we can aid it. Its pathway h. aiways been apward. The passions of man-kind observed their vision, follies delayed, ignorance misled, vice retarded, obstacles obstructed, dangers terrified, but the zig-zag path way yet pointed upward and onward to higher civilization and a purer christianity In this pathway you must tread. Will you lead your race npward with a voice of cheering, a face of kindling love and faith, days given to toil and nights to thought, or will yon be trainpled under foot by the advancing hosts whose march you may assist, but can not

I speak to you, young gentlemen, with the earnestness of one who loves his State with passionate love; who loves and has faith in his race. I acknowledge and accept in love the unity and brotherhood of mun. I look with eager, applanding eyes upon every true step forward, and mourn with sadness every retrogade movement. In the full day of Chris tian civilization I re-echo the old Roman's sublime utterance: "I am a man, and nothing launan is foreign to me." And in this spirit I have spoken, believing it not improper to place before you, with a solemn seriousness. these high themes as the parting charge of this Institute and its Faculty. THE NEGRO RACE DECREASING.

Statistics on file at Washington, and compiled under Radical anspices, show beyond question that the negroes of the South did not increase during the four years of the war and have positively decreased during the six augmented with each annual remove from the date of their being practically set free by the events of the war; and there are hundreds et thousands of white people now in existence who will live to see the time when the negroes of this country will be as scarce and hard to find as those of Mexico now are, after unly fifty or sixty years of freedom. D. Isgrigg, Bourbon; Charles S Todd Daviess; William C. Berry, Clark; Standord Brankem, Scott; and Dr. Talislerro, Unice:nati, have died since the inceting List year Wellington A. Cumungfoun, Eq., on behalf of the city muthorities and citizens of Picris, extended a formal and earnest welcome to the old soldiers. This specen was earnest, eloquent impressive, and received with marked applicase y the andience.

On motion of Gen. Combs, a committee was appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the views of the old soldiers on the peasoon law recently passed by Congress. The General denounced the law, on account of its proscriptive features—excluding from its benefits all inose who may have in any way given and and comfort to the rebellion, and allowing a pension to only such widows of soldiers as were married prior to the time at which they entisted. The old soldiers then formed in procession and marched to the Boutbou House, where a banquet was provided by the mayor and board of councilmen of the cury.

At 21 l'. M. the meeting re-assembled at the Gen. Combs. from the Committee on Resplutions, submitted the following report, which was ununimously adopted :

Resolved, Unanimously by this meeting, that the Congress of the United States be respect-Inlly but urgently petitioned to modity the pension laws approved February 14th, 1871, in the following particulars: 1st. That to exclude any old soldier of the war of 1812 from the benefit of the said act, because of nny actual or supposed sympathy with rebels or participa-tion in the rebellion, in our recent most un-happy civil war, but that unconditional amnesty be extended to all. 21. To extend the provisions of said act to the widows of deceased soldiers of the war of 1812, without regard to the date of their marriage.

The meeting was then addressed by Hon. Garrett Davis, of this city, in an able and eloquent speech, referring touchingly to his recollection of the old soldiers and their services in the past, and denouncing the act of Congress prascribing certain soldiers of that war. Mr. Davis was listened to with marked attention, and his remarks called forth frequent and hearty applause.

On motion, the thanks of the old soldiers were tendered to the city nuthorities and editions of Paris for the generous hospitality and Mowing Machine extended to them.

The Chair, on motion, appointed Major Jere Duncan, Col. Wm. Hamilton, and Dr. George II. Perrin, a committee to prepare obituaries of deceased soldiers of the war of 1812.

On motion, it was resolved that a meeting be field in Lexington on Wednesday, September 13th, 1871. On motion, the meeting theu ndjourned, to assemble in Paris, on June 18th, 1872. J. G. CHINN, Pres't.

Someriting New .-- We are pleased to be able to announce to our home readers, and to the public at large, that the Central Bank of Louisville, Ky., has just inaugurated a new feature in commercial enterprise in that city to wit : the uniting of the two systems o building on St. Clair street is progressing rap banking and warehonsing. In addition to the idly. regular business of banking, the Central Bink Company propose to make cash ad vances on all consignments to them of agricultural and manufactured products, so soon as stored in their warehouse. J. C. Johnston is the president, and Julius Dorn cashier, of Springs on the 4th of July. the Central Bank. The bank is at No 73 Fifth street; the war house northeast corner of 14th and Walnut streets. Consignments by any of the railroads entering Louisville will be taken by the cars directly to the ware evening house-there being tracks connecting with all of them which enter the warehouse.

Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, And Consumption.

Probably never before he the whole history of medicine, he sanything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for judimonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various infections of the langs and throat, have made it known as a reliable potector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children; it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for inclined consumption, and the dargerons affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against shelden ratheds of Croop, it should be kept on head in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this anti-dee for them.

Although settled Cansumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the discase seemed settled, have been completely circuit. Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its inastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Threat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could centh them, inder the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappenr.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Isthma is always relieved and often wholly curred by it.

Bronchitis is generally curied by taking the Chemil Berchard in some and the provided and formed the Chemil Berchard in some and the Chemil Berchard in the Chemil and Consumption. cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Governor:

Cherry Perforal in small and frequent doses, so generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than ansure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.
